

POPULAR TEACHER
ENDS HER LABORS

The information that Mrs. Josie S. Frary, the popular principal of the Crocker Tract school, had passed away on the morning of August 28, plunged the entire community into sincere grief.

For the last seven years she had provided over the Crocker Tract school, identifying herself intensely with every enterprise in its behalf.

Few people ever gave themselves so entirely to their work as she did. She would lighten the burden for all others but never would spare herself.

She finished her last term's work with an excellent graduating program at the Jefferson Union high school auditorium before a large audience of supporters and friends, and at that time seemed to be in her usual good health.

On that occasion District Superintendent W. J. Savage embraced the opportunity to announce that every detail of the program had been prepared and executed by Mrs. Frary, as all of her previous entertainments had been.

There were always many who were willing to lend their assistance, but she just preferred to do everything herself. Such was her nature.

The school work was not by any means all she did. She took care of her own home, cared for neighbors that might be in trouble, and was a real sacrificing mother to any of her own children who were sick or sore. Recently, one of her sons, a veteran of the World war, was sadly afflicted, and the attention she gave to him marked her as the one who gave up everything for others.

Two weeks after the summer vacation began she became ill and was obliged to go to the hospital, where she remained for a fortnight and was much improved when she returned to her home. She was obliged to remain in her room, to which numerous friends came, bringing sympathy and offerings typical of deep regard.

As the time for the reopening of the schools approached she tried to brace up and be ready for the first day, but when the time came she was too weak to go forth and the schools had to open without her. Everybody hoped she would regain her strength soon, but it was otherwise; she grew weaker and had to go to the hospital again, where she remained only a few days when the end came.

As a teacher she was a loving, resourceful person, making the very best and also the very worst feel there was something good in this world worth living for.

Her love went out to every boy and girl no matter what their reputation was, and none of her love was ever wasted, for every child loved her.

Once she was hurt and had to be carried daily to and from her room. It was a picture of true affection to see her big boys carrying her with utmost tenderness.

For the annual trip to Mount Tamalpais she never failed to provide angel cake sufficient for the whole party. On one trip she climbed the mountain with the boys and girls. There was nothing she would not do for them.

Mrs. Frary was born in Springfield, Illinois, August 1, 1868. She came with her parents to California at the age of nine and found a home in the neighborhood of Red Bluff. She became a teacher at the age of eighteen years was married twice and reared two families, and spent the last seven years of her active life as principal of the Crocker Tract school.

Mrs. Frary was the mother of Walter and Roy W. Broadhurst, Mrs. Effie Henderson, Edward Frary, Mrs. Zella Frary Nugent, Herbert F. Frary, and sister of Mrs. Eva Rutledge, W. Herbert Sampson, and Mrs. Lulu R. Rutledge.

Under the auspices of the Eastern Star, of which the deceased had long been a member, the funeral took place on Friday at 2 o'clock p. m. from the mortuary chapel of W. C. Lasswell & Co.

LOSS OF DEVOTED MEMBER

The members of Crocker Parent-Teachers' Association wish to extend to the family of Josephine Frary their sincere sympathy at the loss of their dear and devoted mother. Her keen and kindly understanding of children's problems endeared her to the mothers of the district. She was active in everything pertaining to the welfare of the children. Mothers of Crocker Parent-Teachers' Association will deeply miss her presence and kindly advice in their activities. Josephine Frary was a real mother, a kind and sincere friend, and a just and encouraging teacher. She has gone to the great beyond, but her motherly acts will never be forgotten by those who were close to her, and those friends and associates who knew her best in the role of mother, teacher and friend.

EAGLES ENTERTAIN
COUNTY MEMBERS

At the regular meeting of Colma-Vista Grande Aerie, Fraternal Order of Eagles, held on Thursday evening of last week, an unusually large crowd was present. Only the routine business was transacted, because of the meeting of the combined Aeries of the county which was to follow.

After adjournment of the local Aerie a recess was declared and Mrs. B. J. Adams, of Miriam street, gave two vocal selections, accompanied on the piano by Mrs. Roy Kelly of Brunswick street.

The meeting of the County Aeries was called to order by Chairman Stabenne of Redwood City. Delegates were present from South San Francisco, San Mateo, Redwood City and Daly City. It was unanimously agreed to form an organization to be known as the Associated Aeries of San Mateo County. Mr. Wm. Bolger, of Daly City, was elected President; Arthur Bodien, Daly City, Junior Past President; Brother Sharkey, Redwood City, Treasurer; Brother Sveila, South San Francisco, Chaplain; Brother Flynn, San Mateo, Vice-President; Brother Schottler, Redwood City, Secretary; Brother Peters, Half Moon Bay, Inside Guard; Brother Bogel, of San Mateo, and Brother Steele, of Half Moon Bay, as Trustees.

The next meeting will be held the third Tuesday of September at South San Francisco.

The purpose of the organization is for the social and moral help that it will afford the individual Aeries and members.

Inspirational talks were made by various delegates. From a social standpoint the meeting was a huge success, for it proved that every man was anxious to better himself by association and help better the other man by his companionship.

After the meeting the social committee set a Mexican festive board which seemed to be very successful, judging from the amount consumed. After the inner-man had been appeased the outer man was entertained by a vaudeville show. The first act was Miss Jessie Brown in comic songs; second act, Mr. Walsh, a novelty music act which proved to be very entertaining; third act, Mr. Lou Pierce, a National Broadcasting Co. artist, in song and story; fourth act, Judneck Love in accordion and song.

The entire performance was enthusiastically received, especially the Swiss Cheese Bell Ringers that finished the program. Credit is due M. Casey of the State Theatre for his co-operation.

The sick committee reported all brothers in good health.

The booster committee reported some good times ahead for those that attend future meetings.

ITINERANT PEDDLERS
FLEECE THE UNWARY

Residents of Daly City are advised to beware of itinerant picture agents, who solicit orders, making glowing promises of the great bargains they are offering.

Numerous complaints have reached this office regarding the activities of these irresponsible solicitors. They cheerfully take your money and as cheerfully promise to deliver what would really be big bargains in photographs and enlargements. But those who have put up good coin are still waiting for the goods to arrive. And they have a long waiting spell ahead of them.

One woman who had ordered, and paid for some pictures, has been advised by the eastern firm that the smooth canvasser was supposed to represent, that they had never even heard of the man.

LABOR DAY SERMON SUNDAY
IN PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH

Labor Day will be observed Sunday evening at 8 o'clock in the Grace Presbyterian church with a suitable sermon. Some present day dangers of labor will be shown and how to avoid them. A special young people's meeting will be held in the church parlors at 7 p. m., to which all young people are invited.

The management of Olivet cemetery has donated shrubbery to the Grace Presbyterian church. The pastor of the church will have the best kept garden in town.

ARCHCONFRATERNITY MEETS
SUNDAY AT ST. MAXIMUS

The members of the Archconfraternity of Our Lady of Perpetual Help will hold their regular monthly meeting at St. Maximus church, Daly City, next Sunday evening, September 1. Father Manwaring of the Redemptorist Fathers will be present to conduct the services, preach the sermon and give the blessing of the sick.

SPORTSMEN MEET
IN DALY CITY HALL

There was a large attendance at the meeting of the San Mateo County Fish and Game Protective Association at the City Hall last Tuesday evening. Attorney W. H. Clay, a local member of the association, presided, through the courtesy of President Richard Fisher. Interesting speeches were made by Mayor H. H. Smith, Assemblyman Parkman, Judge Ellis C. Johnson, and others.

The organization has become very popular and embraces the whole county of San Mateo, and has almost four hundred members.

The dues are $5 per year, which includes membership in the Associated Sportsmen of California, the state organization. The objects of the club are: The conservation and propagation of fish, game and forests, and the enforcement of laws in respect thereto, and for sociability, harmony and good-fellowship among true sportsmen.

MERCHANTS WILL RENEW ACTIVITIES

W. H. Clay, secretary of the Daly City Merchants' Association, announces that the next regular meeting will be held at the City Hall Auditorium on September 4, at 8:30 p. m.

No regular meetings have been held during July and August, on account of the vacation season, but now that vacations are about over the Merchants' Association will pursue their activities with renewed vigor.

There is a wide field of endeavor open for an organization of this kind, not only to obtain personal benefits and advantages, but to be of service to the community in general by encouraging needed improvements in various ways, such as better lighting, more children's playgrounds, wider streets and connecting highways, as well as better conditions for the merchants themselves in the pursuit of their various lines of business.

It will be greatly to the interest of all merchants and business and professional men to attend these meetings and to stand together for mutual benefits.

PRETTY WEDDING CEREMONY
AT ST. MAXIMUS CHURCH

Miss Mary Corish, daughter of Mrs. Margaret Corish, of 646 San Diego avenue, became the bride of Peter Conel at a quiet wedding last Saturday morning at St. Maximus church, Rev. Father Lynch officiating.

The pretty bride was gowned in an ensemble of blue transparent velvet, with an eggshell blouse and hat to match. She wore a corsage of orchids.

Miss Virginia Corish, sister of the bride, was maid of honor. She wore an ensemble of blue crepe with a corsage of gardenias.

Following the wedding ceremony the bridal party and the families of the bride and groom attended a wedding breakfast given at the bride's home, after which the bride and groom left for a two weeks' honeymoon, motoring through the southern part of the state. Upon their return they will make their home on Parkview avenue in a pretty home the groom is having built for his bride.

MONTHLY NOON LUNCHEON AT PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH

Wednesday, September 4, the Ladies Aid of the Presbyterian church will give their usual noon lunch. These lunches, with their home cooked food, are a special feature of the Ladies Aid for which they feel justly proud. Business men of the community and their wives are especially invited to attend.

JEFFERSON STARS
AGAIN VICTORIOUS

Displaying spirited team work and at the same time hitting the ball hard, the Jefferson All Stars breezed through to a 11 to 2 victory over the Guadalupe Natives, Sunday at Ocean View.

Charles Aiello hit safely every time he batted to lead the All Stars in the massacre. D. Modena and "Mo" Plansky each collected a brace of timely hits to raise their batting averages.

Gene Keagle did not allow himself to get in any holes and was especially effective with his sharp breaking curves. Thirteen men were turned back via the strikeout route, four hit safely, and only one base on balls was issued, as a result of his fine exhibition.

The Jefferson nine did not waste many hits. Every time a man got on base he was either sacrificed around or the home plate was crossed by safe hitting on the part of the following batters.

SELECTS NEW OFFICERS

On Thursday, August 22, the Parent-Teachers' Association of the Jefferson Union high school held their first meeting of the new term under the direction of their new president, Mrs. Charles McKee. It was a very interesting meeting, owing to the fact that the P. T. A. have a splendid surprise for the football team at their first practice game.

The P. T. A. extends a very warm and cordial invitation to all parents to be present at that event, the date to be given later. Also to attend the opening of the new auto shop building, when the P. T. A. will hold a reception to all parents. It is expected to make this a gala event. So please come.

The following officers and committees were elected for the ensuing year: Mrs. Charles McKee, president; Mrs. Edwards, vice-president; Mrs. Helen E. Cohn, secretary; Mrs. F. Schmidt, treasurer; Mrs. Kennedy, membership; Mrs. Bentley, emblems and magazines; Miss Effie Potter, student aid; Mrs. Helen E. Cohn, publicity; Mrs. Edwards, patriotic chairman.

WATCH THE STOP SIGNS—OR TELL IT TO THE JUDGE

The police department has been busy the past week, arresting those who failed to observe the stop signals on Mission street at the top of the hill. About fifty arrests were made. You are advised to watch your step at all stop signs, if you do not wish to receive a tag which will cause you to "tell it to the Judge."

ASKS MORE TIME TO FINISH WORK

On Monday evening, August 28, a regular meeting of the City Council was held at the City Hall, Mayor H. H. Smith presiding.

The California Construction Company made application for an extension of ninety days within which to complete their contract for the improvement of Jefferson Park. They stated that the work could be completed before this period, but the extension would give them time to get out their assessment and bonds. Permission for the extension of time was granted by the Council.

A communication was received from the Bureau of Sanitary Engineering, State Department of Public Health, saying that the department was desirous of having representation from Daly City at the next meeting of the California Sewage Works Association, which will be held at the Hotel Oakland, in Oakland, October 7 to 9.

The question of the city carrying insurance came up again, and the matter was referred to the insurance committee, to obtain a list of all the city cars, and then advertise from the same.

The work of remodeling the front of the City Hall is progressing very nicely.

Bills for the month were read and ordered paid.

MERCHANTS' TEAM
BOOK TWO GAMES

The Daly City Merchants' baseball team was idle last Sunday, the Redwood Eagles' team, with whom they were booked, having called of the game on Saturday. This coming Sunday, September 1, the Merchants will travel down the Peninsula to play the Palo Alto Base Hospital team, and a tough game is looked forward to. On Monday the Merchants expect to be booked for a game, but the team is not known as yet.

Any of the Daly City fans who can make it should try and get down to see the Palo Alto game. They have a wonderful field down there.

YES, IT PAYS TO ADVERTISE

Occasionally an advertiser admits that money expended in newspaper advertising is money well spent. This fact was brought to our attention by a letter from Rapp Brothers, San Mateo insurance firm, in which Mr. Albert J. Rapp says: "It certainly pays to advertise in your paper, as is signified by the number of policies we have written since we first began our advertising campaign with you."

It is a fact that proper newspaper advertising, backed by service and right prices, is bound to bring results.

DE MOLAY PLANS
THEATRE PARTY

Arrangements have been completed by Crocker Chapter, Order of De Molay, for their theatre party to be held at the New State Theatre, Mission at Oliver street, next Thursday evening, September 5.

The De Molay boys are proud of their venture into a field of progress, and all they ask is support from the people of Daly City and surrounding districts to make their show a huge success.

The boys promise that this will be a show to long be remembered. Manager Casey of the State Theatre has succeeded in obtaining the best for presentation at this mammoth theatre party. The program will consist of talking pictures and short subjects, with novelty presentations, including fifteen acts of selected vaudeville, also orchestra and organ selections.

Several officials and prominent people of San Francisco and our own district have been extended invitations, and their presence is expected, so that the affair will be something for our community and its people to be proud of.

Everything has been done to make the show come up to the standard of programs given by the greater show houses of San Francisco, and with just a little support from the people, the boys will feel that they have succeeded in pleasing, and have made themselves better known to the public.

Don't forget—September 5, State Theatre, Mission and Oliver streets. Show starts at 7 p. m., and will be continued until 1 a. m. A complete program as advertised. General admission 35 cents.

SURPRISE SHOWER TENDERED
PROSPECTIVE TEMPLE BRIDE

A surprise shower was held at the home of Mrs. V. H. Irons, 188 Acton street, the first part of this week, for Miss Ruth Vowles, who is to be married in the Mormon Temple at Salt Lake City, Utah, September 18, to Mr. Edgar Morganegg, of San Francisco, a former missionary in the church of Latter-day Saints. Incidentally, a Mormon Temple wedding is granted only to those who have performed some stellar service for the Mormon church, and Mr. Morganegg's activities have entitled him to this honor.

Covers were laid for twelve, the guests all being employees of the main office of the Western Union Telegraph Company, with which Miss Vowles is connected as a multiplex supervisor. Mrs. Irons was assisted by her sister, Mrs. B. B. Hansen, of Los Angeles, who is visiting her, and Mrs. Vowles, mother of the happy bride to be. The decorations consisted of pink and white sweet peas, and the color scheme of pink and white was carried out in a harmonious and charming manner.

The evening will long be remembered by the following friends: Miss Lynnette Meyer, of Redwood City; Miss Ruth Vowles, Mrs. Vowles, Miss Esther Plovman, Miss Mattie Meyers, Miss Mary Love, Mrs. V. H. "AFTER DARK" SCHEDULED FOR THE GEARY THEATRE

Sunday night, September 1, at the Geary Theatre, San Francisco, a "roaring, monster locomotive" will thunder its way across the stage as gallant Old Tom, played by Edgar Beach, snatches the prostrate Gordon Chumley, impersonated by Frank Wilcox, from beneath the very wheels of the onrushing juggernaut, much to the distaste of villainous Chondos Bellingham, alias Richard Knatchbull, and to the inverse relief of the member of the stage hands' union whose duty it is to act as engineer, fireman and motive power. If the "monster" ever collides with an object as resilient as the carcass of Gordon Chumley, there will be no more engine—and no engine, no show.

"After Dark's" engagement is limited, as the company opening here Sunday night comes directly from its Chicago run and is booked to appear in the large cities of the east directly following its San Francisco and Los Angeles brief stay. Matinees are announced for Wednesday and Saturday.

In addition to the members mentioned, the cast includes Del Lawrence as Chondos Bellingham, Frisella Page, Fannie Louise Carter, Lou Hollinger, Robert Elton, Margaret O'Brien, Lew Silvers, Mac Luckett, Harry Gruver, Harry Rose, Thomas Bradley, Bruce Kent, etc.

These endurance tests try the public's powers of endurance, also.

THE TRAGIC RECORD

As another summer draws to its close the newspapers are crowded with reports of devastating fires. A dropped cigar or cigarette, a campfire, incompletionally extinguished—such little careless things as these have resulted in the destruction of magnificent forests, great factories and thousands of homes.

The most tragic part of it all is that the waste is entirely unnecessary. It is a matter of moments only to properly put out a fire or step on a burning cigar stub, or properly inspect a building for possible risks. Yet when these small tasks are left undone the result may be a conflagration that wrecks the work of years.

A little care and a little knowledge and a little energy on the part of citizens would reduce our fire loss to a minimum. The fact that losses have been decreasing, slowly, for two years, is hopeful but inconclusive. Our fire record remains a national disgrace, a black blot on our efficiency and prosperity.

Insurance and fire-resistant construction of buildings and fire patrols in our parks and forests, are necessary protections. But valuable as they are, they can never be a substitute for individual "fire carefulness." And we pay each year for our carelessness with close to half a billion dollars, beside the inestimable loss in business and in human lives.

Let the Record do your printing.

SIDELIGHTS

Major General M. W. Ireland, surgeon-general of the Army, is an optimist. In a recent statement made in Los Angeles he said: "Disease is being conquered; the doctors are fast working themselves out of a job." But the automobile will continue to make more jobs for them.

Some time ago we read of a fellow who married his mother-in-law. Now comes George Powell of Mexico, Mo., aged 50, who has married his step-mother, aged 55. This is Powell's second marriage and his bride's fourth.

Samuel R. Rosoff recently arrived from Russia on the Berengaria, on which he had the finest accommodations. Now a wealthy New York contractor, he possibly reflected on the difference between his latest passage to America and his first, on which he worked his way as a 11-year-old potato peeler.

A two weeks' fishing trip is hardly an event for which to plan for twenty-nine years, but seven Princeton graduates have been looking forward to such a vacation for that long. Among them were President John Stuart of the Quaker Oats Co., of Chicago, President H. J. Cochran of the Bankers Trust Co., of New York, and five others of the class of 1900, who recently enjoyed the long deferred outing in Maine.

Nickels and dimes are potent if one can gather enough of them. H. T. Parsons, president of the F. W. Woolworth Company, has found sufficient profits in 5 and 10 cent sales to enable him to build a $1,200,000 residence in Paris.

King Albert of Belgium probably believes he would fare better if he maintained his kingly character by keeping personal guards always at hand. While swimming incognito at the fashionable resort of Marikere, thieves rifled his clothes of a gold watch, 500 franc and other valuables, besides tying his garments in hard knots.

We pass along this biological note, vouched for by an artists' club: Brunettes are generally knock-kneed; red heads are generally bow-legged, but are not necessarily hot-tempered, and are well balanced mentally as a rule. Blondes are not classified, although possibly preferred.

A psychology professor at Washington University kept 80 students up all night listening to the radio and playing bridge. Next day, to find out what effect a night's loss of sleep had on their brains, he put them through a stiff examination. It was found that they were sleepy and didn't do so well. Those professors are simply finding out everything.

Two couples wanted Rev. Windsor of Seaford, Del., to unite them in a double wedding, but he noted that one couple had a Maryland license while the other was issued in Delaware. Resolute, he had all drive to the state line, and with each standing in the appropriate state, and the minister straddling the line, the double splice was made.

Another case of taking too much for granted is reported from Wappinger's Falls, N. Y. Oscar Widmer had been annoyed by petting couples parking near his home, so on a dark night he slipped up to a parked car and crowned the driver with a stick. The victim was not a petter, but an old friend who had stopped to chat with a neighbor. Widmer is held under $1,000 bond on a charge of assault.

Aviators are sometimes safer in the air than on the ground. E. F. Schlee, who with William Brock flew from Detroit to Tokyo a few months ago, was struck by an airplane propeller while removing blocks from under its wheels at a Detroit airport, and his skull was fractured.

Whether pajamas for street wear become popular or not, it appears that men are justified in seeking lighter clothing. Dr. Fisk of New York induced a young man and a young woman, picked at random, to allow him to weigh the apparel they had on. The man's weighed ten pounds, the woman's less than two pounds.

In Sacramento county, California, disrespect for law seems to have gone pretty far. While the sheriff slept his pants were stolen from his hotel room and when found in the hotel grounds next morning their pockets were empty.

Walter Cannon, instructor at a Honolulu airport, is lucky that he didn't go off with a bang a short time ago. He landed his plane on a box of dynamite, scattering the sticks in all directions, but none exploded.

Margaret Lunn, Wellesley College student, is said to be a persuasive letter writer, and thereby earns a modest income. Other students employ her to write their dads for money, giving her 5 per cent commission on the proceeds.

Fourteen unusually husky "girls" recently obtained jobs in a tobacco warehouse in Turkey and lost them again when it was found that they were young men in women's clothing. They pleaded that they were forced into skirts because girls were given preference in employment.

A cow staggering from a brook near Cleveland, Ohio, caused her owner to investigate, with the surprising result that the animal's alcoholic breath revealed that she was drunk. Officials were called and discovered two stills in a barn nearby, but the operator had fled.

In baseball, base stealing is considered a creditable performance, but only when a game is in progress. Two men in Quincy, Mass., were fined $10 each for stealing three bases literally from the diamond at Milton Park, when they thought no one was looking. They didn't try to carry away the home plate, which was nailed down.

The Kansas City Star suggests that had the radio been in use a little more than a century ago, we might read in his biography that "Franz Peter Schubert first became known to the public by singing his songs during the Peerless Axle Grease hour."

Mrs. Bobby Burns, the widow of a Baltimore pugilist, applied for a permit to become a professional boxer. She says she will take on all comers in her class, men or women, intimating that some of the men pugs are not so hot. She declared: "I can hold my own with a lot of palookas who claim to be prize-fighters."

Chief of police Robert Williams of Wink, Tex., recently arrested a man he should have winked at. His prisoner revealed that he and the chief had done time together in the Oklahoma penitentiary, from which the chief, then known as Joseph Roocket, escaped in 1915.

Laws forbidding persons to drive automobiles until they reach a certain age are common, but in Cape May, N. J., it has been decided that being too old is as bad as being too young, so a renewal of his license was refused "Uncle Jimmy" Clark, aged 90. Indignant, Mr. Clark declared: "I'll bet I can see and hear better than most of the youngsters."

That the way to get rid of a fool law is to obey it may be a novel idea, but it worked in Prague, Czechoslovakia, recently. The legal speed limit established in 1910 was 9 miles an hour, thus police were always safe in arresting anyone as a speeder. Taxi drivers got tired of harassment and agreed to strictly limit their speed to the prescribed limit, with the result that traffic congestion nearly drove the police crazy. Now the law is dead.

THE TRAIL OF '98

I am in a box at the Palace Grand. The place is packed with rowdy men and ribald women. I am at the zenith of my shame. Right and left I am buying wine.

How I loathe myself! But I think of Berna, and the thought goads me to fresh excesses. I will go on till flesh and blood can stand it no longer, till I drop in my tracks. I realize that somehow I must make her pity me, must awake in her that guardian angel which exists in every woman. Only in that way can I break down the barrier of her pride and arouse the love latent in her heart.

Always amid that lurid carnival of sin floats the figure of Blossom, blossom with her child-face of dazzling fairness, her china-blue eyes, her round, smooth cheeks. How different from the pinched palid face of Berna! Poor, poor Berna! I never see her, but amid all the saturnalia she haunts me. The thought of her is agony. I cannot bear to think of her. I know she watches me. If she would only stoop and save me now! Or have I not fallen low enough? I must go deeper yet. Faster and faster must I swirl into the vortex.

In all that fierce madness of debauch, thank God, I retained my honor. They beguiled me, they tried to lure me into their rooms; but at the moment I went to enter I recoiled. It was as if an invisible arm stretched across the doorway and barred me, out.

And Blossom, she, too, tried so hard to lure me, and because I resisted it inflamed her. She would coax me with the prettiest gestures, and cajole me with the sweetest endearments; then, when I steadfastly resisted her, she would fly into a fury and flout me with the foulness of the stew.

It was in one of the corridors of the dance hall in the early hours of the morning. The place was deserted, strewn with debris of the night's debauch. We were up there, Blossom and I. I was in a strange state of mind, a state bordering on frenzy. Not much longer, I felt, could I keep up this pace. Something had to happen, and that soon.

She put her arms around me. "Come," she said.

She led me toward her room. No longer was I able to resist. My foot was on the threshold and I was almost over when—

"Telegram, sir."

It was a messenger. Confusedly I took the flimsy envelope and tore it open. Blankly I stared at the line of type. I stared like a man in a dream. I was sober enough now.

"Aunt you coming?" said Blossom, putting her arms round me.

"No," I said hoarsely. "Leave me, please leave me. Oh, my God!"

Her face changed, became vindictive, the face of a fury.

"Curse you!" she hissed. "Oh, I knew. It's that other, that white-faced doll you care for. Look at me! Am I not better than her? And you scorch me. Oh, I hate you. I'll get even with you and her. Curse you, curse you—"

She snatched up an empty wine bottle. Swinging it by the neck she struck me square on the forehead. I felt a stunning blow, a warm rush of blood. Then I fell limply forward, and all the lights seemed to go out.

There I lay in a heap, and the blood spurring from my wound soaked the little piece of paper. On it was written:

"Mother died this morning, Garry."

"Where am I?"

"Here, with me."

"Low and sweet and tender was the voice. I was in bed and my head was heavily bandaged, so that the cloths weighed upon my eyelids. By my bedside some one was sitting, and a soft, gentle hand was holding mine.

"Is that you, Berna?"

"Yes, please don't talk."

I thrilled with a sudden sweetness of joy. A flood of sunshine bathed me. It was all over, then, the turmoil, the storm, the shipwreck. I was drifting on a tranquil ocean of content. Blissfully I closed my eyes.

Yet there was something, some memory darker than the others, some shadow of shadows that baffled me. As I battled with a growing terror and suspense, it all came back to me, the telegram, the news, my collapse. A great grief welled up in me, and to my agony I spoke to the girl.

"Berna, tell me, is it true? Is my mother dead?"

"Yes, it's true, dear. You must try to bear it bravely."

I could feel her bending over me, could feel her hand holding mine, could feel her hair brush my cheek, yet I forgot even her just then. I thought only of mother, of her devotion and of how little I had done to deserve it. So this was the end: a narrow grave, a rending grief and the haunting specter of reproach.

My sobs were choking me, and Berna was holding my hand very tightly. Yet in a little I grew calmer.

"Berna," I said, "I've only got you now, only you, little girl. So you must love me, you mustn't leave me."

"I'll never leave you—if you want me to stay."

"God bless you, dear. I can't tell you the comfort you are to me. I'll try to be quiet now."

I will always remember those days as I grew slowly well again. Berna left me much alone, alone with my thoughts. Often when all was quiet I knew she was sitting there beyond the curtain, sitting thinking, just as I was thinking. Quiet was the keynote of our life, quiet and sunshine. That little cabin might have been a hundred miles from the gold-born city. It was so quiet. How sweet she looked in her spotless home attire, her neat waist, her white apron with bib and sleeves, her general air of a little housewife. And never was there so devoted a nurse.

It was sweet prolonging my convalescence, yet the time came when I could no longer let her wait upon me. What was going to happen to us? Was ever a stranger situation? She slept in the little kitchen, and between us there was but that curtain. The faintest draught stirred it. There I lay through the long, long night in that quiet cabin. I heard her breathing. Sometimes even I heard her murmur in her sleep. I knew she was there, within a few yards of me. I thought of her always. I loved her beyond all else on earth. I was gaining daily in health and strength, yet not for the wealth of the world would I have passed that little curtain. She was as safe there as if she were guarded with swords. And she knew it.

"I'll play the game fair," I said to myself. I must be very careful. Our position was full of danger. So I forced myself to be cold to her, and she looked both surprised and pained at the change in me. Her heart was innocent, and she could not understand my sudden coldness. The girl was winsome beyond words, and I knew I had but to say it and she would come to me. Yet I checked myself. I retreated behind a barrier of reserve. "Play the game," I said; "play the game."

So as I grew better and stronger she seemed to lose her cheerfulness. Always she had that anxious, wistful look. Once came a sound from the kitchen like stifled sobbing, and in the night I heard her cry. Then the time came when I was well enough to get up, to go away.

I dressed, looking like the cadaverous ghost I felt myself to be. She was there in the kitchen, sitting quietly, waiting.

"Berna," I called.

She came, with a smile lighting up her face.

"I'm going."

The smile vanished, and left her with that high proud look, yet behind it was a lurking fear.

"Are you ready?" I went on.

"Ready?"

"Yes, you're going, too."

"Where?"

I took her suddenly in my arms.

"Why, you dear little angel, to get married, of course. Come on, Berna, we'll find the nearest parson. We won't lose any more precious time."

Then a great rush of tears came into her eyes. But still she hung back. She shook her head.

"Why, Berna, what's the matter? Won't you come? Don't you love me?"

"Yes, I love you. It's because I love you I won't come."

"Won't you marry me?"

"No, no, I can't. You know what I said before. I haven't changed any. I'm still the same—dishonored girl. Everybody knows. No, I could never marry you, never take your name, never bind you to me. You must go away, or—stay."

"Stay?"

"Yes. You've been living alone with me for a month. I picked you up that night in the dance hall. I had you brought here. I nursed you. Do you think people don't give us credit for the worst? I am supposed to be your mistress. Everybody knows; nobody cares. There are so many living that way here."

be free to go if we wish. There will be no bonds but those of love. Oh, stay, stay!"

Her arms were round my neck. The gray eyes were full of pleading. The sweet lips had the old, pathetic droop. I yielded to the empery of love.

"Well," I said, "we will go on awhile, on one condition—that by-and-by you marry me."

"Yes, I will, I will; I promise. If you don't tire of me; if you are sure beyond all doubt you will never regret it, then I will marry you with the greatest joy in the world."

So it came about that I stayed.

The year following, in which Berna and I kept house, was not altogether a happy one. Somehow we had both just missed something. The thought of her terrible experience haunted her. I knew, and I, too, suffered.

I tried to make her forget, yet I could not succeed; and even in my most happy moments there was always a shadow of Locasto; there was always a fear, the fear of his return.

My partners and I were up to our necks in business these days. Our Gold Hill property had turned out well. Jim was busy installing his hydraulic plant on Ophir creek, and altogether we had enough to think about. I had set my heart on making a hundred thousand dollars, and as things were looking it seemed as if two more years would bring me to that mark.

"Then," said I to Berna, "we'll go and travel all over the world, and do it in style."

"Will we, dear?" she answered tenderly. "But I don't want money much now, and I don't know that I care so much about travel either. What I would like would be to go to your home, settle down and live quietly."

She was greatly interested in my description of Glengyle. Particularly was she interested in my accounts of Garry, and rather scoffed at my enthusiastic description of him.

"Oh, that wonderful brother of yours! One would think he was a small god, to hear you talk. I declare I'm half afraid of him. Do you think he would like me?"

"He would love you, little girl; anyone would."

"Don't be foolish," she chided me. And then she drew my head down and kissed me.

"Oh, I'm so happy," she said with a sigh.

"Are you, dearest?" I caressed the soft tress of her hair.

Aye, she was happy, and I will always bless the memory of those days, and thank God I was the means of bringing a little gladness into her married life. She was happy, and yet we were living in what society would call sin. Conventionally we were not man and wife, and yet were man and wife more devoted, more self-respecting. Never were man and wife endowed with purer ideals, with a more exalted conception of the sanctity of love.

CHAPTER XII

Two men were crawling over the winter-locked plain. One, the leader, was of great bulk and of a vast strength; while the other was small and wiry, of the breed that clings like a louse to life while better men perish.

The small man was breaking trail. Down almost to his knees in the soft snow, he sank at every step; yet ever he dragged a foot painfully upward, and made another forward plunge.

"Come on there, you damned little shrimp; get a move on you," growled the big man from within the frost-fringed hood of his parka.

The little man started as if galvanized into sudden life. His eyes, thickly wadded with frost, gazed out with the fear of a hunted beast.

"Curse him, curse him," he whim-

Pleasure and Profit in Scorpion Hunting

One of the most peculiar hunting expeditions on record is that which takes place at more or less regular intervals in the town of Mardine, in Asia Minor. The town is surrounded by ancient walls built to protect it from invaders, and hidden in various places in these walls are hordes of scorpions which often become a menace to the population. In order to keep down the number of these pests, said to be death-dealing, a bonus is offered by the municipality and regular hunts are organized. The hunts take place at night when the hunters, armed with lanterns, poke around the walls and dislodge the scorpions. The next day they carry them to the town officials

Oddities in Language

A great many American Indian languages do not use the sound of "B." The famous Aztec language of Mexico does not have it and the majority of North American Indians are unable to pronounce the sound. However, some Indian languages have the "B"—for example, the Jamez tongue of New Mexico has a perfect "B," and in California the Pomo Indians, the most expert basket makers in the world, have it. A good example of a proper name beginning with "B" is Bagli, a woman heroine in Pomo mythology, about whom stories are told. Her name is pronounced Bah-geel.

pered; but once more he lifted those leaden snowshoes and staggered on.

The big man lashed fiercely at the dogs, and as they screamed at his blows he laughed cruelly.

"Mush on there, you curs, or I'll cut you in two," he stormed, and the heavy whip fell on the yelling pack. They were pulling for all they were worth, their heads down, their shoulders squared. Their breath came pantingly, their tongues gleamed redly, their white teeth shone.

Wary and worn were men and dogs as they struggled onward in the growing gloom, but because of the feeling in his heart the little man no longer was conscious of bodily pain. It was black murder that raged there.

At last they reached the forest fringe, and after a few harsh directions the big man had the little one making camp. The little man worked with a strange willingness. As he gathered the firewood and filled the Yukon stove, he hummed a merry air. He produced sourdough bread (which he fried in bacon fat), and some dried moose-meat.

To men of the trail this was a treat. They ate ravenously, but they did not speak.

The silence was broken by a whining and a scratching outside. It was the five dogs crying for their supper, crying for the frozen fish they had earned so well. They wondered why it was not forthcoming.

"Dog feed all gone?"

"Yep," said the small man.

"H—! I'll silence these brutes anyway."

He went to the door and laid onto them so that they slunk away into the shadows. But they did not bury themselves in the snow and sleep.

They continued to prowl round the tent, hunger-mad and desperate.

Then rolling himself in a robe, the big man lay down and slept.

The little man did not sleep. He was still turning over the thought that had come to him. Outside in the atrocious cold the whining malamutes crept nearer and nearer. In the agonies of hunger, they cried for fish, and there was none for them, only kicks and curses. They howled their woes to the weary men.

The little man crawled into his sleeping bag, but he did not close his eyes. He was watching.

About dawn he rose. An evil dawn it was, sallow, sinister and askew.

The little man selected the heavy-handled whip for the job. Carefully he felt its butt, then he struck. It was a shrewd blow and a neatly delivered, for the little man had been in the business before. It fell on the big man's head, and he crumpled up.

Then the little man took some rawhide thongs and trussed up his victim.

He gathered up the rest of the provisions, made a pack of the food and lashed it on his back. Then, after a final look of gloating hate, he went off and left the big man to his fate. At last the Worm had turned.

The dogs were closing in. Nearer and nearer they drew. They wondered why their master did not wake; they wondered why the little tent was so still; why no plume of smoke rose from the slim stovepipe. All was oddly quiet and lifeless. Closer and closer they crept to the silent tent.

The man opened his eyes. Within a foot of his face were the fangs of a malamute. At his slight movement it drew back with a snarl, and retreated to the door. Locasto could see the other dogs crouching and eyeing him fixedly. What could be the matter? What had gotten into the brutes? Where was the Worm? Where were the provisions? Why was the tent flap open and the stove stone-cold? Then with a dawning comprehension that he had been deserted, Locasto uttered a curse and tried to rise.

At first he thought he was stiff with cold, but a downward glance showed him his condition. He was helpless. He grew sick at the pit of his stomach, and glared at the dogs. They were drawing in on him. Their gleaming teeth snapped in his face. Violently he shuddered. He must try to free himself, so that he could fight.

It frequently happens that they must wait upon the pleasure of that official, when they while away the time by making their ferocious captives engage in combat. Business Reverse

The wayfarer was making an appeal for charity from a well-dressed gentleman.

"Well," said the other, "I seem to remember you. Didn't you have a little business of some sort once upon a time? Don't tell me you've taken up begging?"

"Yes, I have, sir," returned the other. "I've got no other way to get along since I lost me business."

"But how did you come to lose it?"

"My business was a one-hand laundry," said the mournful soul, "and one day my wife just up an' left me."

Intelligent Pig

A story from Rockland, Maine, asserts that Charlie Emery, a police officer, has trained a pig to dig clams. He lets his pig loose on the clam flats, and the animal roots up the bivalves by the peck, never making a mistake in finding the genuine clams. The pig is also said to drink soda-pop and to eat candy.

Have him connect both to the same aerial with a switch to operate them alternately. 3. Selectivity—test each for sharp separation of stations.
4. Ease of control—judge and compare for simplicity.
5. Beauty—of design, of woods, of finish. Watch details. Run your hand over each.
6. Reliability—look inside and compare for extra power, size and strength.
7. Quiet Operation—free from A C hum, sputter and all background noise.

TO SAVE THE OLYMPIA

Whether Admiral Dewey's flagship Olympia shall be preserved as a national relic or sent to the scrap heap is a question now agitating the Navy Department and many citizens of the country. The old vessel is no longer of use for naval purposes and has been out of commission since 1922.

Two proposals for preserving the former flagship have been made, one embodied in a bill introduced in Congress provided for maintaining the vessel as a memorial at Washington; the other being from the chamber of commerce of Olympia, Wash., for which the ship was named, offering to preserve it there. The fate of the Olympia will be decided by Congress.

Built in San Francisco and placed in commission on February 5, 1895, the Olympia has seen service in many parts of the world. From one of her 8-inch guns was fired the first shot at the battle of Manila on May 1, 1898, when Dewey destroyed the Spanish fleet under Montejó. No Americans were killed and only six wounded while the Spanish losses in killed and wounded totalled 650 or more. It is only fair to say that the Spanish fleet was overwhelmingly outclassed in the battle and fought gamely in the face of certain defeat.

However, Dewey became through this victory the outstanding hero of the Spanish-American War, and his sturdy little flagship is affectionately regarded by the people of the United States. The Olympia should be preserved, and doubtless will be.

ABOLISH THE SUBS

The loss of the British H-47, rammed by another submarine a few weeks ago, has revived talk of outlawing underwater craft through international agreement.

Hundreds of lives lost, often under the most horrible circumstances, during peace times since the submarine was first evolved as a naval weapon periodically brings home to everyone the fact that these death-traps have no place in a civilized world.

Even many high naval authorities agree that the submarine should be abolished, and it seems probable that a real effort will be made with that end in view. As a gesture in that direction, the British House of Commons has voted to cancel the building of six new submarines recently authorized. The First Lord of the British Admiralty said:

"What a great thing it would be if we could persuade the nations of the world to abandon the submarine. Apart from the humanity of such a move it would be an immense saving. We could do without many destroyers, now needed solely to guard against submarine attack."

Now that naval limitation is soon to be discussed again, the abolishment of the submarine should be included as a part of the program for the reduction of armaments.

SHUN FALSE ECONOMY

True economy is entirely praiseworthy, particularly for those who have difficulty in making ends meet, but there is a petty sort of skimping which is not economy, and which is really wasteful in the long run.

Time and effort expended to effect the saving of a penny here and a nickel there is often a source of loss instead of gain. Shopping around for an hour in the hope of saving a few cents on a trivial purchase is one example of this. Another is to buy an inferior article when a good one would cost but a little more.

The same principle applies in business management. To deny oneself the use of a reasonable amount of up-to-date equipment is not economy, because such equipment will usually pay for itself many times over in time and labor saving.

Spending money wisely is one of the surest means of making more money. Skimping is not always economy, and stinginess is not always thrift. Too many of us are "penny wise and pound foolish."

GROWTH OF DAIRYING

In view of the growth of the dairy industry in many states, the question has arisen as to whether this may not lead to overproduction and consequent loss. When all the facts are taken into consideration it appears that there is little cause for apprehension on this score.

For several years health authorities, parent-teachers' associations and home demonstration agents have urged the increased use of milk and other dairy products as a means of better nourishment and better health for both old and young. One effect of this campaign of education is seen in the fact that more than 300,000,000 gallons of ice cream are now consumed annually in the United States, or nearly three gallons for every man, woman and child. This is almost three times the per capita consumption of 20 years ago.

Some interesting experiments recently reported by C. U. Williams, manufacturer of Icomatic electric refrigerators, showed that various animals grew much faster when ice cream constituted one-third of the diet, due to the presence of a proper proportion of proteins, carbohydrates and fats, as well as health-giving vitamins and mineral salts.

In addition to the greater consumption of ice cream more whole milk, butter, cheese and other dairy products are also being used per person than formerly, and all this requires increased production. It is therefore safe to say that the dairy industry has before it a long period of growth and prosperity.

TOLERANCE IS NEEDED

In the present state of unrest, with crime rampant throughout the land, the need for tolerance and co-operation among honest and well-meaning people is greater than ever before.

Too much energy is being wasted in fruitless wrangles over politics, religion and other controversial matters, and too little is being spent in sincere efforts to promote higher standards of public and private conduct.

People will always have different views on many questions and no amount of argument or abuse will ever lead us all to the same way of thinking. It is proper to have convictions and to stand by them, but we should accord the same rights to our neighbors.

On many of the vital problems of our time a majority of people could agree, if they would only lay aside unimportant differences and join in advancing those things that are really worth while.

We are favored in prosperity and opportunity beyond all other nations, yet we are wasting a great portion of our priceless heritage through senseless wrangling over trivial matters. Above all things else, we need to cultivate the spirit of true brotherhood.

DIESEL AIR ENGINE

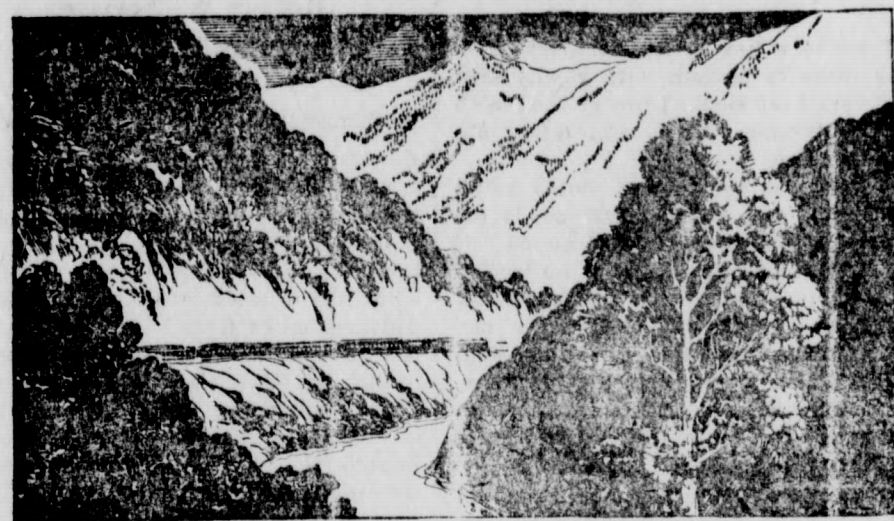

After many months of development a practical Diesel airplane engine has been produced, and its first tests have been almost startling in their results, particularly in economy of fuel. On a flight of 560 miles the fuel cost was only $4.68, or considerably less than one cent a mile.

The new engine, designed by Capt. L. M. Woolson, a World war aviator, has no ignition system and no carburetor, and it burns ordinary fuel oil. While its weight is considerably greater than that of a gasoline engine or like horsepower, it is believed that on long flights the less weight of fuel required to be carried will compensate for the heaviness of the engine.

There is little doubt that the new engine marks a distinct advance in aircraft development, as it combines added elements of safety with the economy of operation. Its further development will be watched with keen interest by all who are interested in aviation.

MARY PICKFORD COMING TO NEW STATE THEATRE

Mary Pickford has renounced her curls and little pout and appears as a roguish, captivating young modern in "Coquette," her sensational hundred per cent talking picture which comes to the New State Theatre for three days, Monday, Tuesday, and Wednesday, September 2, 3 and 4.

The foremost little lady of the screen has outgrown the film childhood during which she delighted millions in "Little Annie Rooney," "Tess of the Storm Country" and countless other unforgettable masterpieces.

Realizing that this is an inventive age, with its new conventions and high-paced activities, there was no place for the make-believe child she had created. Mary Pickford has decided to begin a new career as the woman she really is.

"Coquette" is the first vehicle of the new Mary Pickford. The famous actress who made her stage bow with David Belasco, you will hear and see as a laughing, carefree southern belle who flirted, kissed and forgot, until there came a man she couldn't forget—HER man.

You'll be thrilled, amused, fascinated, charmed by this romantic drama pivoting about the daughter of a proud, old Southern family and her rugged mountaineer lover.

In "Coquette" the clash of the high-born vs. low, father vs. lover, convention vs. love, wealth vs. worth, results in a tale of great conflicts and smashing drama. "Coquette" presents Mary Pickford in her first speaking part in the films and the greatest role of her career.

We fail to understand why a particular kind of voice is required for the taddies, inasmuch as they all sound alike.

GAY STREET PAJAMAS

When the city of Buenos Aires passed an ordinance some time ago forbidding men to appear on the street without their coats it paved the way for some startling developments in male attire, according to a recent magazine writer.

One day when the temperature ranged around 100 in the shade a resourceful young Argentine appeared on the street wearing the coat of his pajamas, which was strictly within the law. Instantly the idea spread and in a short time whole suits of pajamas became fashionable for street wear. Then the manufacturers began producing pajamas in brilliant colors and fantastic patterns, which "rapidly became the favorite garb of the Beau Brummels of the city."

Probably this development illustrates a desire on the part of men for more comfortable clothing and a secret longing for gay colors which have heretofore been denied them, except in neckties and hats. However that may be, the Buenos Aires fashion has much to commend it, combining comfort, economy, and possibly beauty—if anything pertaining to the male appearance could be classed as beautiful.

A contract for the construction of a steel bridge over the Arroyo San Geronimo at Point Reyes Station has been awarded by the Marin County Board of Supervisors to A. Mattson of San Bruno. Mattson's bid for the work was $24,055.12.

Plans for a new outdoor amphitheater, to accommodate 3000 persons, which may be enlarged to a 10,000 capacity, were made at a meeting of the Roosevelt Glen Amphitheater Association at San Jose. Present plans call for a stage on which 500 persons can take part in productions.

A monument is being erected by the citizens of Comptonville in memory of J. Pelton, inventor of the Pelton waterwheel, who conceived and built the first wheel in his old tin shop in the little Sierra County town. The monument is to be eleven feet in height and is to be surmounted by an eleven-inch model Pelton wheel, a valuable invention to the miner.

Napa Grange has voted to recommend to the Napa County Board of Supervisors that $2,500 be included in the 1930 budget for the purpose of making a survey of the available water supply of the county. A bill recently enacted by the legislature provides that a like sum be supplied by the State for the purpose.

Pittsburg will at once commence the erection of a water tower to hold 152,000 gallons, or 50 per cent larger than the present tank. The tank is made necessary by the sale by the city of the site of the present tower at Fourth and Cumberland streets to C. L. Hoffman, of Oakland. Hoffman states that a large business structure will be started as soon as he gets possession of the property. The sale price of the lot is $27,500.

Featured by reductions ranging from 2 cents by 54 cents in the city, the San Joaquin county tax rate for the coming year has been set by the Board of Supervisors. Stockton's county rate was cut from $2.42 to $2.40, and with an additional reduction in the special school tax of 54 cents, a total decrease of 65 cents is affected.

California is leading in aviation, so G. A. Nelson of the Continental Air Express told members of the Hanford Exchange Club. There on a visit to establish Hanford as a stop on the San Francisco-Los Angeles line, he declared that the state has more ships and pilots than any other state in the union.

Interesting sidelights of California history are revealed as plans progress for the Diamond Jubilee State Fair which opens in Sacramento August 31st. For example, a silver pitcher. It was awarded by the State Agricultural Society in 1860 to Jerome C. Davis for having the best farm in California. The farm is now the State Agricultural college at Davis, Yolo county. The historic trophy will be exhibited in the Yolo county booth at the Jubilee State Fair.

Apparently successful in its fight to stop sinking of the new earth fill approaching the eastbound subway on the new line to the Martinez-Army Point Bridge, the Southern Pacific is now experiencing trouble in building the new grade to the Army Point bridgehead. Over 16,000 yards of new fill west of Goodyear sank recently shoving up great mounds of tulle earth. C. A. Jeffers, local contractor has just completed four miles of new fencing along the railroad's new right of way west of Goodyear where the bridge approach diverts from the old main line.

Nearly $3,000,000,000 of stocks, bonds, notes and other securities have been authorized by the State Railroad Commission since the public utilities act became effective March 23, 1912. The commission cast up and found that it has passed on applications for permission to issue securities totaling $3,074,957,271.07, and has authorized the issuance of securities totaling $2,841,274,842.64. As an indication that the commission does not place the rubber stamp of its approval on all issues asked, Recorder H. A. Frazier called attention to the fact that the commission has refused to permit the issuance of $113,495,786.65 of securities, and has dismissed applications for $120,180,641.78.

With Pittsburg's factories and the industrial area of the Contra Costa waterfront as its objective, the Pacific Gas and Electric Company is taking the necessary preliminary steps to invade the Contra Costa territory for the distribution for domestic and industrial uses of natural gas. It was disclosed with applications being filed for two franchises. The first application was filed with the Board of Supervisors for a franchise to lay pipe lines for the transmission of natural gas from the Alameda county line via the tunnel road to Walnut Creek serving the community of Lafayette, St. Mary's college, Orinda and the rapidly developing suburban areas en route.

With the completion of a paving program covering twenty-one city blocks, every street inside the city limits of Concord will be paved, according to City Clerk W. E. Ballenger. The present paving program will cost the city about $50,000, Ballenger said, and will be completed by October 1.

Uncle Sam contributed $2182 to Butte County schools during the past fiscal year to help educate Indian children, according to Jay S. Partridge, county superintendent of schools.

LEGION'S WORLD SERIES ON RADIO

Will Broadcast Games Play by Play in Big Hook-Up.

Dan Sowers, national director of the Junior baseball program of the American Legion which this year has enrolled more than 300,000 boys, has been informed by John W. Ellwood of New York, vice president of the National Broadcasting company, that the Legion's world series to be played in Louisville, Ky., September 4, 5 and 6, will be broadcast play by play in a national hook up, direct from the grand stand.

Graham McNamee, the famous sports announcer, will do the broadcasting. Arrangements also are being made by Judge K. M. Landis, high commissioner of baseball, to address the youth of the country preceding the games.

"The Legion's baseball competition has taken its place in interest nationally along with other sports which attract universal interest," Sowers said. "Not only will 300,000 boys throughout the country be vitally interested in the world series, but also their relatives, friends, and the many varied organizations which are represented by teams they sponsor in the program."

"In some of the larger communities, organizations other than the Legion have entered the Legion program by sponsoring leagues of boys' teams, and their championship team in the final analysis, has been in competition for city, county, district or higher honors, all under Legion supervision."

The national tournaments to decide the two teams which will play in the world series begin the first week in August. These are the regional tournaments, six west of the Mississippi and six east. Each team in the regional tournaments is the championship team of a state. The regional champion teams then play in two sectional tournaments, and it is the two sectional champion teams which participate in the world series to be held in Louisville.

AUTUMN FRUITS.

Most of us appreciate the peach, pear, plum as well as grapes, they are so well adapted to any meal and between meals as well.

The peach is one of the most popular fall fruits. It possesses the smallest amount of sugar of all the common fruits and in its fresh state is particularly good for diabetics and rheumatic sufferers. Apples resemble peaches so closely that they are used in place of them in any recipe calling for peaches.

The acid of the grape is mainly tartaric, combined with potash, lime, and magnesia, all elements needed in the human body. Grapes, as most fruits, are best in their natural state. Plums are healthful, but are made more digestible by cooking; they contain a large amount of acid which is not good for the rheumatic.

Quinces are much liked for the flavor and the large amount of pectin which they contain. For this reason they are used to combine with other fruits for jellies and marmalades.

Quince Scallop.—Peel, core and cut three quinces and three sweet apples into eighths. Place a few buttered bread crumbs in the bottom of a baking dish, over this cover with a layer of the quince and apple, sprinkle with a layer of cranberries, cover with sugar and season with cinnamon. Repeat until all the fruit is used. Bake an hour in a slow oven.

Quince Souffle.—Boil four quinces until tender, after peeling and quartering them. Pass through a coarse sieve, add the juice and a little rind of a lemon. Soak one-half cupful of bread crumbs in one-half cupful of milk, and add to the quinces. Stir in the well beaten yolks of three eggs and fold in the stiffly beaten whites of the eggs after adding one-half cupful of sugar. Pour into a baking dish and bake twenty minutes in a moderate oven. Serve with cream or any sauce. Pears served in the same way make a nice souffle.

Quince Custard Pie.—Cook two cupfuls of quince to a pulp in a little water. Add half a lemon rind to the quince when stewing them. Add the juice of a lemon, one-half cupful of sugar, the yolks of two eggs well beaten, and one-half cupful of milk. Line a deep pie pan with pastry and pour in the mixture, adding the stiffly beaten eggs and a teaspoonful of vanilla and bake until the custard is set.

Seasonable Good Things.

For a day when any effort to prepare food is a burden, try the following for dessert. It is easy to prepare and quickly done.

Orange Pudding.—Take one cupful of diced oranges, and marshmallows, one cupful of cream, a teaspoonful of lemon juice and one-fourth cupful of sugar. Whip the cream, have all the ingredients cold, fold in the sugar, lemon juice, marshmallows and oranges.

For the porch parties so much enjoyed, the simplest of food with a cup of tea is all that is necessary to start the conversational ball rolling. For those who prefer cards to conversation, a few tables may be scattered about.

Then a hot muffin baked in the tiny tins, split and buttered, there can be nothing daintier.

Muffins.—Cream one-fourth of a cupful of shortening, add one-fourth cupful of sugar and a well-beaten egg. Sift three teaspoonfuls of baking powder with two cupfuls of flour and one-half teaspoonful of salt, mix alternately with one cupful of milk. Bake in the small tins.

Cinnamon Toast.—Cut bread into thin slices. Toast to a golden brown and spread with butter. Cut off the crusts. Sprinkle liberally with sugar and cinnamon and place under the broiler to melt a little. Serve on a hot plate. Toast squares with jam are delicious. Cut thin slices of bread into two-inch squares, dip into melted butter on all sides, place under the broiler, turn until well browned. Serve hot with jam.

Marmalade Pinwheel Biscuit.—Pat out a rich biscuit dough about one-half inch thick and spread with orange marmalade. Roll up and slice into rings and bake. These may be prepared ready for baking and placed in the refrigerator until just before they are needed. Bake twenty minutes.

Anchovy Sandwiches.—Spread thin slices of bread with pimento cheese softened with cream. Cut into rounds and decorate with a slice of stuffed olive with a small sprig of parsley on either side of the olive round.

Daddy's Evening Fairy Tale

By Mary Graham Bonner

THE PETS

The guinea pigs lived in a large box in Sadie's room in the winter time, and in the summer they had a little yard all to themselves.

They were very fond of cabbage and lettuce and fresh vegetables which in the summer were very easy to get. They used to love to look through the wires of their little yard and see all the vegetables growing up in another part of the yard.

Of course they never had to take it out in just looking at them—for they were given plenty to eat!

In the winter they really had just as good a time, for Sadie saw that they had all they wanted to eat.

Whenever they were hungry they would squeal in their funny little voices, and Sadie would give them fine leaves of cabbage or of lettuce. Now there were two guinea pigs which were quite big. They were the mother and daddy guinea pigs.

There were three smaller ones—they were the children.

It was nighttime, and Sadie was sound asleep. As it was cool weather they were in the box in her room.

One by One.

The guinea pigs were all asleep, too, when they heard a scratching sound on their box.

First Daddy Guinea Pig opened his eyes.

"What is it you want?" he asked. "Don't be afraid," said a low voice. "I'm Peter Gnome. I've come to call on you."

"I won't hurt you. I think you are all very nice. Your children are very lovely, too, sir."

That pleased Daddy Guinea Pig so much that he invited Peter Gnome to look at the children and to play with them.

Mother Guinea Pig was awake now, and as Peter Gnome gently took the little guinea pigs in his hands, they squealed sleepily and seemed no more than little round bits of fuzz.

First Peter Gnome stroked one and then another, and he told the daddy and mother he could not possibly make up his mind as to which one was the loveliest.

That pleased the parents exceedingly as you may imagine.

Peter Gnome paid a nice little call upon them and then as a present he left them a little lettuce which had been grown by the fairies and which they ate that very night.

How exciting it was to have a special banquet like that!

For dessert they had a piece of cabbage leaf grown by the Gnomes. Now Mr. Guinea Pig had always loved his children. Some guinea pig fathers are very strange.

They eat up their children when they are young and have to be kept away from their children.

In fact it is a wise thing to keep them separate for some time.

But Sadie had not known this and so they had been together. Mr. Guinea Pig was a fond and affectionate father and when the children were grown-up and people asked Sadie if she had kept the daddy away from them when they were young she had said they had always been a loving family.

They were indeed adorable pets and Sadie loved them devotedly.

And even if people did say that Daddy Guinea Pigs ate their young it hadn't happened like that with her pets.

They were really an adorable family!

String Trick

Get a piece of string about two feet long and join it to form a circle. But before tying place some small object on the string, such as a button or a brass ring—something that will slip along the string.

Then ask a friend if he can cut through the string without the object falling off. Perhaps he'll try to manage this, but you can be sure he won't be able to do it. There is, of course, a trick in it, and it is simple enough. Just tie a loop in the string, so that the object is within the loop. Then cut the string through the biggest loop. And he'll have to agree that you have managed it!

Acidity

The common cause of digestive difficulties is excess acid. Soda cannot alter this condition, and it burns the stomach. Something that will neutralize the acidity is the sensible thing to take. That is why physicians tell the public to use Phillips Milk of Magnesia.

One spoonful of this delightful preparation can neutralize many times its volume in acid. It acts instantly; relief is quick, and very apparent. All gas is dispelled; all sourness is soon gone; the whole system is sweetened. Do try this perfect anti-acid, and remember it is just as good for children, too, and pleasant for them to take.

HALLELUJAH AND BANANAS

One hardly knows whether to be indignant or merely amused by the shameless manner in which our jazz composers steal and distort the melodies of the masters, in grinding out the syncopated songs and dance tunes of the day.

It is a far cry from the majestic "Hallelujah Chorus" of Handels' "Messiah" to the notorious "Yes, We Have No Bananas," but they contain essentially the same melody. Rachmaninoff's "Prelude" has been transformed into "The Russian Rag."

"Marcheta" is adapted from Nicolai's "Merry Wives of Windsor;" Chopin's "Impromptu in D-flat Major" becomes "Chasing Rainbows."

Some of the modern "composers" are even brazen enough to indicate by their titles the sources of their stolen airs, as witness a tune called "Ragged William," based on a theme from Rossini's "William Tell," and another entitled "So This Is Venice," a distortion of the well known "Carnival of Venice," by Schumann.

More recent are the "jazzed up" versions of Liszt's "Second Hungarian Rhapsody," Grieg's "Peer Gynt," and many operatic airs.

There are dozens of other similar examples of piracy which might be pointed out, which are easily recognizable by anyone acquainted with real music. But, as there is no way to stop such a sacrilege, it is probably just as well to smile, for indignation will not help matters.

STOP IT NOW

Discussing the automobile accident problem, the Jacksonville, Times Union recently said, in advocating liability legislation on the order of the New York plan: "It is very evident that many persons are permitted to operate motor vehicles on streets and highways when there is no justification whatever for such permission to be granted or to be enjoyed. Irresponsible persons are the most numerous causers of accidents, fatal and otherwise."

"The very irresponsibility, as in the matter of paying for damages that result from their recklessness, ought to be sufficient to bar certain motor car drivers from using the public streets and highways. They are irresponsible, financially, frequently not owning the car or vehicle they operate in public. They laugh when damages, to be paid by them, are mentioned."

"They should be made to understand that they must pay for such accidents as they cause. If they cannot be made to understand this by education, then the teaching should be by way of drastic law, energetically and effectively applied."

"This entire matter of accidents due to the use of motor-driven vehicles needs more serious attention than as yet has been given to it. Otherwise the slaughter of innocent people will go on and increase in numbers. The general demand should be: Stop it now."

TALKIES IN CRISIS

Will the talking picture become a permanent successor of the silent movie, or will it be condemned because of faulty technique which is beginning to arouse violent criticism on the part of patrons?

This question is no doubt causing a good many producers to sleep less soundly just now. As a novelty the talkies have had a wide appeal, but as a steady source of entertainment their popularity appears to be on the wane. Many picture fans frankly admit that the harshness and poor synchronization of talking pictures are getting on their nerves.

It is reported that several picture theatres have already discarded their sound apparatus and that two or three new silent pictures have met unusual success.

One thing seems certain. The talkies must be improved a lot, and soon, if they are to maintain their place as a popular form of entertainment.

Even though pajamas for street wear may not be universally adopted, the idea may encourage venturesome souls to leave off their coats.

CALIFORNIA'S FAIR OPENS TOMORROW

An army of more than 2,000 workers is today setting the stage for California's greatest State Fair which opens in Sacramento Saturday, August 31. Rated with the world's leading horticultural and livestock shows, California's annual exposition this year will even outshine the Golden State's Fairs of the preceding five years.

Two factors are responsible for the enlarged scope and added splendor of this year's Fair. It is the seventy-fifth anniversary of the founding of the exposition, a Diamond Jubilee celebration, and, equally important, other states of the Pacific Slope are joining with California in commemorating the notable anniversary.

The 135-acre tract, twelve big buildings, scores of stock barns, and five huge tents comprising the exposition grounds and facilities are being given holiday garb, with color and brilliancy in every turn.

Fifty-five California counties are putting the finishing touches to their exhibits in the main horticultural pavilion, the most complete and diversified collection of California's choice products ever assembled under one roof. This feature alone, it is declared by R. A. Condee, president of the State Fair, is one that could not be duplicated anywhere in America.

In the Western States building magnificent exhibits are being installed by Oregon, Utah, Nevada, Idaho, Wyoming and the California farm of President Herbert Hoover. Not since the Panama-Pacific exposition fourteen years ago has the West united in showing such a display of its resources and products.

Prize winning livestock, America's best, is rapidly filling the barns, stables and sheds which cover more than twenty acres of the show grounds. When the fair opens there will be 2,500 animals ready to compete in the various departments, stock and dairy judging, harness and running horse races and the spectacular State Fair horse show. Charles W. Paine, veteran secretary of the State Fair, describes this feature as the most remarkable in California's history.

The magnitude of the Diamond Jubilee Fair is further stressed by the record number of entries in the Educational Department. Never has there been such a demand for space from all sections of the state. More than 2,000 California schools are sending exhibits of varying sizes and descriptions, necessitating the erection of a large tent to accommodate the overflow from the educational building.

The Women's building with interesting exhibits of domestic art and science, the Art Gallery in which will be shown the best works of California artists; the Machinery building displaying complete lines of farm equipment and implements; the poultry building with the biggest collection of birds in State Fair records; the manufacturers' annex; aircraft show, and State Fair cooking school give added evidence of this "biggest and best" State Fair California has yet prepared.

The exposition will have an abundance of entertainment features, including a daily and nightly program of spectacular acts in front of the grandstand, the State Fair midway, four bands, dancing on a huge open-air platform, fireworks, boxing contests, and special attractions among which will be the Shell Happytimer Program and Radio Star Revue on the afternoon of September 1st and the Lions' Clubs Country Girl Contest on September 4th.

The exposition will run for ten days this year instead of the customary eight days, concluding on Monday, September 9th, California's Admission Day.
